Born and raised in a coastal Maine fishing village my work is rooted in the dramatic Maine landscape. I am interested in finding space and place within it through acts of reclamation pertaining to womanhood, sexuality, family and childhood. For this reason I specifically seek visual intersections in the landscape that evoke the sensations of aging, renewal, scarification, and other such signifiers of the body, history and memory.

As a democratic medium the multiple lends itself to these themes through the dissemination of information. In this way, ephemeron and performance are themes that I am currently exploring in my graduate work.
